In September of 1966, a group of men were playing poker on a boat docked on Virginia Point. A dispute arose during the game, and one man struck another. Two more men joined the fight, and knives were drawn. The other men broke up the fight.

In 1968, the Virginia legislature passed a law making poker playing illegal. However, the law was later declared unconstitutional, and the prohibition was lifted.

In the 1970s, poker playing became more popular again, and the Virginia legislature passed another law making it illegal. This law is still in effect today.

The Virginia legislature is currently considering a proposal to legalize and regulate poker playing. If the proposal is approved, it is likely that poker playing will become legal once again.

In the meantime, poker playing continues to be illegal in Virginia, and those who engage in it risk being arrested and/or fined.
